Question 1

Study the following source material and then answer the questions which follow.

Source A

Adapted from S Hodgson, The Man who Made the Peace: The Story of Neville Chamberlain, first published in 1938

It is very easy to criticise the peace of Munich. It can be represented as a betrayal of a small nation and as a betrayal of British interests, leaving Britain to face precisely the same threat again a few years or a few months on. All this misses the great fact of the Munich Agreement, which makes it a landmark in the history of Britain and the world. For the first time in history the voice of the common people of all countries made itself heard. A man was found to give this voice expression. The people know their power now. The politicians know that it is possible to mobilise public opinion for peace. That knowledge is the great prize which has been won at Munich; and the man to whom the world owes this triumph is Neville Chamberlain.

Source B

From a speech made in the House of Commons by Winston Churchill, 5 October 1938

No one has been a more resolute and uncompromising struggler for peace than the Prime Minister. Everyone knows that. But we must face facts. We have suffered a total and unmitigated defeat. Silent and mournful, Czechoslovakia has been abandoned into the darkness. I fear that in future the Czechoslovak state cannot be maintained as an independent state. I think you will find that, in a period which may be measured in years but may only be measured in months, Czechoslovakia will be swallowed up by the Nazi regime.
