The taxi arrived at the airport. The old lady paid the taxi driver, got out and went into the entrance hall of the airport. After she had handed in her suitcase, she had to wait.

An hour later she was sitting in the plane. The engines became louder and the plane began to go faster and faster. The buildings flew past. Soon afterwards they were above the clouds. "How lovely," murmured the lady.

The fat gentleman, who was sitting next to her, asked kindly, "Is it your first flight?" She nodded. "It is a big adventure for me." "I often fly," he said. "It is no longer exciting – but I am tired."

The lady took a photo out of her handbag and showed it to the fat gentleman. He smiled politely. "My son has a good job," she said proudly, "but unfortunately I don't see him often. It costs rather a lot to fly to Canada. It is a pity".

"At the beginning of May," she continued, "his first child was born, a little boy called Felix. I am looking forward very much to seeing him. I shall spend four weeks with the family." She stopped speaking. The man had fallen asleep!
